

SPECIAL ISSUE - EXPRESSION OF INTEREST

Please address the following and submit details to the Editors at crimjournal@qut.edu.au

Proposed Title of Special Issue

Editors

Short biography for each editor

Theme of the Special Issue

Proposed contributors (if known)

The Journal has an international scope and contributors should be well known and respected in both academia and/or the justice and human rights field. As an international journal we are obliged to ensure that all special editions meet this criteria.

Timeline

Please detail your timeline - the workflow and proposed dates of call for papers, submission deadlines, review and revision and finalisation work.

Date of delivery

Publication date to be subsequently established in consultation with the Journal's Chief Editors and the Journal Manager

Method of peer review

All articles and review essays submitted to the journal are to undergo double blind peer review by at least two reviewers. Reviewers may be recruited from the International Editorial Board and/or from other suitably qualified academics based on the subject matter of received submissions.

Method of dissemination

How you plan to promote the special issue once published (blogs, social media, network events, webinars etc.)

Please consult www.crimejusticejournal.com for details about policies and style guide. Note that contributors will be expected to submit articles that comply with the style guide.

When a special issue EOI has been accepted for publication, guidelines for the guest editor(s) and authors will be forwarded.

Final copyediting and production will be undertaken by the Journal Manager.

Professor John Scott and Dr David Goyes, Chief Editors